Background

The DAWN Training Institute is a three-week intensive training programme. The programme draws on both DAWN's feminist analysis which interlinks issues under the themes of Political Economy of Globalisation including Gender and Trade, Political Ecology and Sustainability, Sexual and Reproductive Health and Rights, and Political Restructuring and Social Transformation; and the network's considerable experience in UN conference processes and other sites of struggle, including the global civil society movement against economic globalisation, as well as regional, sub-regional and national processes.

The third DAWN Training Institute will be held in South Africa from 19 November – 7 December, 2007. It is being organised by Development Alternatives with Women for a New Era.

Objectives

- to build capacity of young feminist activists from Southern countries, especially in understanding linkages between different issues and advocacy agendas, particularly those concerned with economic and gender justice;
- to strengthen feminist advocacy work at global and regional level; and to deepen analysis in some complex areas.
- to prepare young feminists for the challenges entailed in working for gender justice in the present global geopolitical and economic context.

Participants

- Only application from the economic south will be considered.
- Preference will be given to participants that will
- The applicant's professional and working experience, as well as future plans will be considered during selection.
